

MOTHERS N POSSE HUNT FOR MANIAC WHO ATTACKED GIRL

North Bergen, N. J., Communities Search Woods for Her Assailant.

SLASHED HER DRESS. Frightened Child Not Injured Bodily by Man Who Took Her.

A frowzy tramp sauntered out of a clump of woods, near Union Place, in North Bergen, just over the Union Hill line, at 6 o'clock last evening, and for a time watched a little group of small girls from eight to nine years old at play in the street. Then he walked among them, muttering as though in anger, and caught up Anna Welch, eight years old, of No. 619 Union Street, Union Hill, and carried her away toward the woods.

The other children, because Anna did not cry out, assumed that the man was some one from her home and went back to their play after he entered the woods pulling little Anna after him. They did not realize that she was too nearly paralyzed by fright to cry out.

A moment or two later they heard Anna screaming and saw the man run out of the woods and down the road into North Bergen. A moment later Anna reappeared, shrieking, her dress and underclothes had been slashed with a razor or sharp knife so that they were hanging on her only in ribbons. She had not been harmed in the least otherwise.

While the children were gathered about the sobbing little girl Police Lieutenant John Quiller of North Bergen came upon them. In half a minute he was at a police telephone spreading an alarm all over the nearby New Jersey towns.

PLAIN FOLK IGNORED, BIG BUSINESS FAVORED

Senator Pomerene Tells Ohio Democrats G. O. P. Repudiated Pledges. COLUMBUS, Aug. 22 (Associated Press).—Charging that the Republican Administration at Washington had repudiated its campaign pledges of 1920 and that a great part of the legislation by the present Congress had been for the benefit of big business rather than the ordinary citizen, Senator Alton Pomerene, delivering the keynote address at the Democratic State Convention here to-day, predicted a Democratic victory in November.

HOLLAND ATTACKS GOV. MILLER IN N. Y. LABOR CONVENTION

Says G. O. P. if Returned to Power Will Establish Industrial Court.

Urging laboring men and women to forget both the Republican and Democratic Parties and vote only for those who would guarantee "Labor first, my party afterward," James P. Holland, President of the New York State Federation of Labor, to-day urged the delegates to the convention of that organization to return to their homes and begin non-partisan political campaigns for the fall elections.

He bitterly criticized Gov. Miller and the Republican majority at Albany, saying that all legislation supported by labor for the interests of the working man had been practically rendered null and void by the Republicans and declared that the worst of the forest have more protection in New York State than the working man.

If Governor Miller and the Republican Assemblymen and Senators now in power are returned to office, he declared, another year would witness the enactment in New York State of a law like the Kansas Industrial Court act.

The American working men, he said, must take over the Government, both at Washington and Albany, and run it on the basis of "labor first." "Nowadays, there are two laws in this country. One for the rich and one for the poor," he continued. "The best illustration of that fact was the release, during President Taft's Administration, from the Atlanta Penitentiary of that gigantic robber, Charles W. Morse. He said he was about to die and had to get out. Well, he isn't dead yet, but he ought to be."

POUGHKEEPSIE, Aug. 22.—More than 600 representatives of union labor assembled here to-day at the opening of the fifty-ninth annual convention of the State Federation of Labor. From their discussions is expected to grow a vigorous non-partisan political campaign this fall, in which union men will be asked to align themselves together at the polls, irrespective of party, to "support the friends and punish the enemies" of organized labor.

Couness, Barred Out of U. S., Blames Chivalry of American

Robert Grant of Ardmore, Pa., Told Authorities He Intended to Marry Her—Deceit Discovered.

The mistaken chivalry of an American is responsible for an order, promulgated yesterday, deporting the Viscountess Barenegere de Becdelievre, a pretty young Frenchwoman who arrived here on the White Star liner Homeric last Thursday. Through a friend, Miss Alice Reynolds of No. 238 Walnut Street, Brookline, Mass., the Viscountess has appealed to Washington.

The deportation order is based on the supposition that the Viscountess may become a public charge. She says she has plenty of money and ascribes her plight to Robert Grant of Ardmore, Pa., who told the immigration authorities he intends to marry her.

But the Viscountess admits she has a husband in France. She has sued for divorce, but the decree has not been granted. Also she denies that she intends to marry Mr. Grant.

"Mr. Grant thought that by saying he would marry me he would clear the way for my admission," explained the young woman. "Instead of that his declaration has shut the gate. However well meant his testimony might have been, it has done me a cruel injury."

QUINN ACCUSED OF GUN PLAY IN THE HOUSE OFFICES

Ex-Service Man Says Congressman Ordered Him Kept Out of Building.

(From a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—A sensational aftermath of the Mississippi Congressional campaign and the charges of payroll grafting lodged against Representative Percy E. Quinn of the 7th Mississippi District came yesterday afternoon when Quinn invaded the office of Representative Stegall of Alabama, gun in hand, and, pointing the weapon at Walter E. Boren, whom he accused of making a false affidavit during his campaign, demanded that Boren accompany him to the office of the Superintendent of Police of the House Office Building.

Taken by surprise and unarmed, Boren, who lives in Quinn's district, alleges that he was compelled to accompany the intruder to the office of the Superintendent of Police, where Quinn stated that he was going to "send him to the penitentiary" and he presumptuously ordered the Police Superintendent to keep Boren out of the building "forever," using abusive and threatening language.

Some of the things which Boren charged against Quinn in affidavits circulated in the Mississippi district where Quinn has been on the run since his defeat on Aug. 15, were as follows:

That Boren, an ex-service man, who was out of employment, called at Quinn's office shortly after Quinn's primary in 1920, where he had been working without salary at various times in the preceding months, and asked for regular employment, whereupon Quinn said: "I need the money," referring to the fact that the Congressman's wife was drawing $120 per month of the clerical appropriation.

That Quinn failed to make proper accounting in his income tax report of $1,440 thus added to the family income, although the Congressman's income, including that received from private sources, aggregates $20,000 to $25,000 annually.

After the sensational gun-play and the ejection of Boren from the House Office Building, Quinn directed two other members of Congress, sent for Boren and assured him of employment, taking the ground that Quinn had exceeded the authority of a Congressman.

The campaign in the 7th Mississippi District was so heated that toward its end Quinn and his opponent, Hugh V. Wall, a former District Attorney, became so violent that friends persuaded them to discontinue the discussions, fearing trouble.

"Quinn came to my office yesterday afternoon," said Boren to-day, "while I was working at a desk behind a screen. He stepped up to me, gun in hand, and, using vile outbursts, ordered that I accompany him to the police headquarters of the building, threatening to send me to the penitentiary."

He has pursued me relentlessly since that day and has threatened time and time again to "get me," whenever he met any of my friends. While I was in France fighting for $30 per month, Quinn was knocking down clerk hire at home, although a wealthy man. I believe that Quinn dug his political life by his conduct yesterday."

The charges concerning Quinn's nepotism were published in The Evening World in its expose of Capital conditions.

Quinn achieved publicity in Washington, last June, for carrying his lunch by elevator to the Capitol in the interest of thrift.

ARMY BOARD SAYS LIEUT. COL. BECK WAS INNOCENT MAN

Former Judge Day Who Killed Him Had Pleaded the "Unwritten Law."

(Special from a Staff Correspondent of The Evening World.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Lieut. Col. Beck, who was slain by Judge Day near Fort Sill, Okla., several months ago, has been exonerated by an army board which has been inquiring into the affair for several months. It was learned to-day.

The report is now on the desk of the Secretary of War for approval. The case was one of the most sensational in the history of the State. Judge Day and Beck were warm personal friends. A party at the Day home preceded the tragedy. Judge Day carried a number of the guests to their homes in his car and upon his return claims to have found his wife struggling with the army officer. On seeing this through a window of his home Judge Day rushed to his room, produced a pistol and shot and killed Beck, according to his version.

Secretary Weeks, when asked about the matter to-day, stated that he understood the report of the Army Board was on his desk, but that he was on his way to the Cabinet meeting and had not had a chance to examine its contents.

From other sources, it is learned that Beck was given a posthumous exoneration of any wrongdoing. The courts acquitted Day, who pleaded the unwritten law.

Mayor Takes His Vacation At All Seasons

Once Confined to Winter, Now Off for Saratoga Again.

Mayor Hylan is getting the vacation habit. He just loves to make a dash up Saratoga way, where the ponies are now running, and by way of diversion motor through Greene County in the Catskills, where he was born, or hobnob with the white-clothed, pipe-clayed shoe brigade at some fashionable hotel at Lake Champlain.

There was a time when the Mayor took his vacations in the winter. Now he takes them both summer and winter. He was generally understood that the real wireless wave instrument was the long distance telephone.

Not long ago the Mayor and William Randolph Hearst were in the near vicinity of the Empire City Race Track and a few days ago they spent about five days together at Saratoga. Now the Mayor is to leave to-morrow for Saratoga and Lake Champlain, on a ten-day tour. He likes the nice, refined, genteel air of the latter place. Mrs. Hylan will accompany him.

She has just completed an extensive tour of Europe with her daughter and son-in-law.

FUND NOT TO BE USED FOR DALL PARTY PURPOSE

Collins in Suit Acted as Minister of Finance.

DUBLIN, Aug. 22 (Associated Press).—Michael Collins, in initiating the action to restrain New York banks from releasing funds to Eamon De Valera or his agents, acted in his capacity as Minister of Finance of the Dail Eireann and not as Chairman of the Provisional Government, it was officially explained to-day.

As Minister of Finance, it was stated, Mr. Collins was a sort of co-trustee of the funds, which the Dail trustees agreed some time ago should not be used for party purposes as the funds had been subscribed to assist in the general purpose of gaining recognition of the Irish Republic.

FLIVVER PLANE IS THE LATEST

Up 1,000 Ft. From Standing Start in 30 Seconds.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 22.—A flyver plane, the smallest heavier-than-air flying craft in America, will receive its baptism in the clouds here next week. The midge airplane, said to be a "dead ringer" for its cousin Elizabeth, for whom it is named, has a wing spread of fourteen feet.

The plane was designed by Capt. Aubrey L. Eagle and Lieut. Edwin W. Asp, of Ellington Field, Texas. Its makers claim the flyver will be able to attain a height of 1,000 feet from a standing start in thirty seconds.

It is strictly a sport model, equipped with airbrakes, and is very simple of operation, according to its designers.

Where Did Man Fished From River Get Scotch, Hidden in Heavy Coat?

Bottom of Hudson Must Be Paved With Whiskey or Somebody Is Breaking the Law.

The bottom of the Hudson must be paved with Scotch whiskey, or else somebody has been breaking the law.

About 10 o'clock this morning Johnnie Buchal, customs guard, was dangling his heels from the string-piece of Pier No. 60, performing all of his duty by merely keeping his eyes open. Soft job, Johnnie's.

Sleeping at the pier was the good ship Lapland of the Red Star Line, which came in from Antwerp a few days ago. Sleeping beside the ship was a barge, and sleeping (apparently) away out in the river was a motor boat.

Johnnie Buchal's job was to see that nobody took anything away from the Lapland in a manner forbidden by the laws of the land, particularly the law of Mr. Volstead.

The motor boat drifted lazily alongside the barge and a man in a mac-knaw climbed out. He yawned, stretched his arms and proceeded across the barge to the ship. After a while he returned and Buchal, having nobody else to talk to, invited him to stop. He emphasized the invitation by drawing a revolver.

At the same moment the drowsy motor boat woke up, its engine throbbing wildly, and fled. But the man on the barge had failed to observe the departure. He jumped to the spot where the boat had been and found himself in the river. He sank at once and some time elapsed before he resurfaced. When he did come up he seemed to be having some difficulty in swimming, and so he tried to throw off his burdensome coat.

But Johnnie Buchal had got a hook by this time, and he drew forth the swimmer, coat and all. The rescued but ungrateful fellow said he was James McGuire of No. 345 West 16th Street, and in various pockets of his remarkable coat he had ten bottles of first class Scotch. He wouldn't tell where he got it, but Johnnie figured that if he didn't find it on the bottom of the river he may have got it from McGuire. Anyway Johnnie arrested him and told him he could have his say in the Federal Court.

Some say the booze must have been found in the river because it's against the law to bring it in ships.

Take the Dough Out of Deauville Playing U. S. Jockey to Win, 40-1

Americans Great and Small Get Hot Tip on Frank O'Neill's Mount and Go the Limit.

DEAUVILLE, Aug. 22 (Associated Press).—Americans at this most fashionable and most expensive of French summer resorts—and they are numerous—enjoyed free hospitality yesterday at the expense of the pari-mutuel machines, when American Beauty, ridden by Frank O'Neill of St. Louis, France's premier jockey, got home by a head to win the first race on the card at the rich odds of 40 to 1.

A hot tip was whispered mysteriously among the Americans in hotel lobbies yesterday and there were few Americans in Deauville this morning who would admit their failure to have at least a small bet down. Those ignorant of the tip evidently liked the name and played the horse on sentimental or patriotic grounds, especially the pickers in the field, where, owing to the heavy play, the winner only paid 20 to 1, against 40 to 1 in the big ring.

Incidentally, O'Neill, with 112 winners, is far at the head of the jockeys in the flat racing this season, his nearest rivals being George Bellhouse of England, and Matt MacGee of Sheephead Bay, with 70 and 66 winners respectively.

New Curtiss Glider Will Soar Like Albatross, Says Inventor

Constructed Like Flying Boat, It Rises After Being Towed Short Distance.

Glenn H. Curtiss, pioneer bird man, in an interview with The United Press, to-day revealed the more important features of construction in his new glider, now ready for its preliminary tests, which is expected to soar over the water.

The glider, constructed along the lines of a flying boat, will "take off" from the surface of the water after being towed a short distance to obtain a flying speed. The extreme lightness of the construction and a new idea which has been embodied in the curve of the wings, will assure a flying speed of as low as 18 miles an hour.

The entire plane weighs but 150 pounds, even though the wing spread is almost as great as the Curtiss army training planes. It will have an eight to one factor of safety.

"I believe we have achieved something new in light plane construction," Curtiss said. "There will come a time, I believe, when machines will be able to utilize the air currents for soaring flight in much the same manner as the albatross."

"It is difficult to predict how far in the future such developments may be. We are in the first stages of experiment, but after repeated tests and trials I believe we may develop something practical."

RUNAWAY HORSE'S FALL IN MANHOLE ATTRACTS 5,000

Impossible to get Prince out without fairly pulling him to pieces. Meanwhile advice was freely offered by gathering hundreds of young men and women to watch the rescue of the East 25th Street Police Station came and established "fire lines" at 37th and 39th Streets and half way between avenues on 35th Street.

At the suggestion of the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals men, the Hickey Contracting Company of No. 260 West 41st Street hurried an electric pavement cutter to the spot and by 1 o'clock workmen were engaged in cutting a four-foot wide runway down to the bottom of the manhole from a spot thirty-six feet away.

The police estimate of the crowd by this time was 5,000, increasing rapidly.

The grinding and the ripping of the street opening machine, an excited Prince that he began frantic struggles in the seven-foot box at the bottom of the shaft and the effort to save him that way was discontinued.

William Ryan and Special Officer Murphy of the society went down with a heavy hammock, got it under Prince's belly, and with the aid of a 15-foot derrick and fifty men on a 2-inch rope through a block and fall, raised a very unhappy looking and somewhat scratched horse to the surface. There was great cheering. Prince had been in the hole for two hours and ten minutes.

None of the cables in the conduit had been damaged. The "Trouble Gang" of the New York Edison Company had reported ten minutes after the accident and put in temporary wooden shovels and shoring all around the horse's hoofs.

THREE HURT IN FALL OF THEATRE ROOF

Steel Framework of Bronx Building Collapses.

The steel framework for the cement roof of a moving picture theatre under construction at No. 491 East 35th Street, near Brown Place, the Bronx, by the Stanhold Company, fell at 10 o'clock to-day.

Three workmen, Charles E. Primo of No. 45 Stanton Street, Rudolph La Bond of No. 618 East 107th Street and Castiglione Mariano, fell twenty feet into the basement excavation. All were taken to Lincoln Hospital by Ambulance Surgeon Hunt suffering from cuts and bruises.

The police reserves of the Morristania Station were sent to the scene to handle the crowds which collected.
